In an exchange of shots Middleton killed the night watchman, Middleton in a statement said he shot the night watchman, only after the latter had shot at him. The shooting apparently grew out of Middleton being unaware of a rule that automobiles were not allowed to drive into the campus. Self arrested Middleton who started to drive away. Middleton said Self shot at him and he returned the fire. Middleton's companion, Miss Clover Coleman is from Paducah also Middleton's home.

L. M. U. CLOSES TWENTY-SIXTH YEAR TODAY

New President Being Elected and New Financial Policy Under Way to Usher in Changed
Era for School

INSURING YEAR PROMISES LARGE DEVELOPMENTS

The close of the twenty-sixth year of Lincoln Memorial University today, February 12, ushers in a new era for the school. A new president is being selected who will institute new policies, principally confined for the next few months to the payment of the outstanding obligations of the University.

Since the resignation of Dr. Hubbell last May, the duties of president have been divided between the heads of the scholastic and business departments, Dean T. B. Ford, and Clay Cunningham. These men have been most effective in working out present problems and developing certain lines of the school. Dean Ford states that the enrollment to the present date slightly exceeds that of last year, and that he is encouraged with the increases in the college department.

Recently Dean Ford was made a director in the National Association of American Colleges, and every effort is being made to raise the standards of the University. Graduates of L. M. U. have gone to several large universities in the last two or three years and in every case they have made good. A recent report from the Medical Department of Vanderbilt University is that an L. M. U. student ranks sixth in a class of over one hundred students. This speaks well for the pre-medical course at the University.

One of the most attractive features of the school at the present time is the Smith-Hughes Department under the charge of Prof. Frank C. Grannis. Prof. Grannis has twenty-four boys in the course and they are making unusual progress in the project work which has been started since the first of the year. One boy has already paid for two brood sows and made a net gain of $65 from the sale of fourteen pigs. Other projects of the boys will bring substantial results in the spring.

Another distinctive department of the institution is the Opportunity School headed by Prof. J. M. Nicholson. Prof. Nicholson is the soul of this department having begun it three years ago and having developed it to the extent that it now contains more students than any other department of the school. This department is for the training of ungraded students who have not had an opportunity in their home communities of completing the eight grade. Some remarkable results have been obtained by Prof. Nicholson.

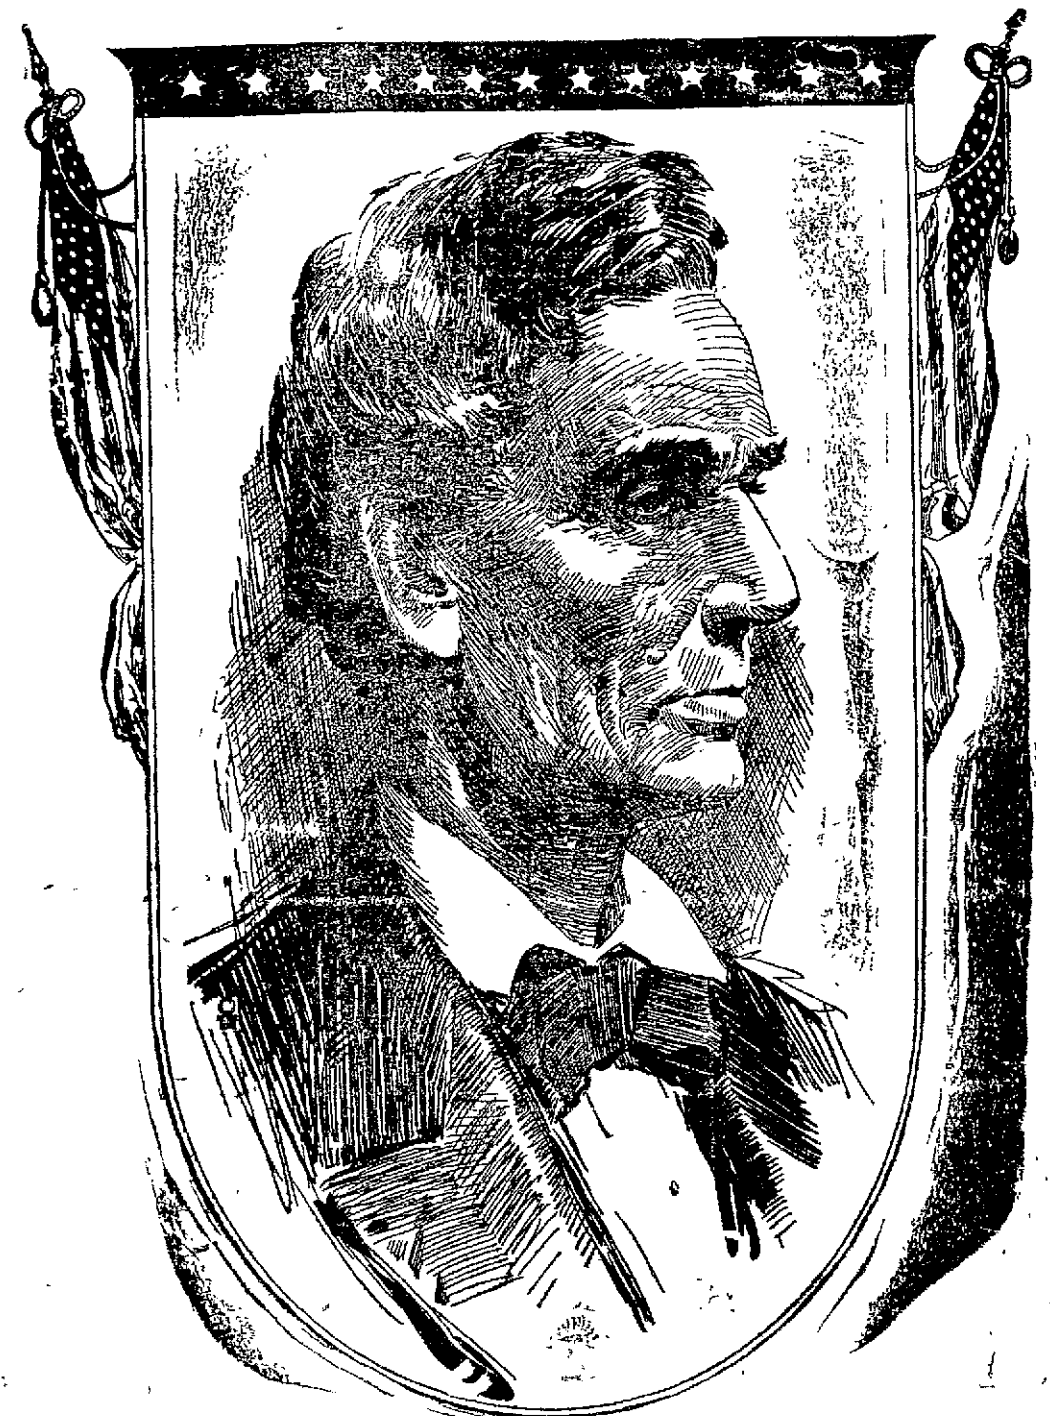

Every friend of the University has cause to be proud of the fine record of the business administration under Mr. Cunningham. By close economy he has been able to live within the budget of the school, and to effect a saving in several instances. By a continuance of this policy, and by developing the departments so they can be more nearly or entirely self-supporting, a new record for the school should be established.

With a strong man as president, and with organization such as the school now has, next year should bring a large development.

DR. GRAY PREACHES LAST SERMON HERE

M. E. Church, South, Attends Service —Tribute by W. R. Pool to Departing Pastor

The Presbyterian Church was filled to capacity last night with friends of Dr. Johnson Archer Gray there to hear his farewell sermon. Dr. Gray left last night for Lexington, his new charge. The M. E. Church, South, congregation dismissed its evening services in honor of Dr. Gray's last service and attended the Presbyterian church in a body. The Rev. W. K. McClure, in a short address, expressed to Dr. Gray the regret of the community and of the other churches that he was leaving. W. R. Pool, speaking for the Presbyterian church gave the following tribute to Dr. Gray in the Brotherhood Bible Class yesterday morning:

"I regret that my harp sounds but a minor strain—a lament, for the things that might have been—a lament for the opportunity that knocked at our door unheeded, passed on.

"It might be said of some ministers that they are wonderful preachers but are lacking as pastors—it might be said of other ministers that they are weak preachers but dutiful pastors.

"Dr. Gray as a preacher was beyond criticism. His sermons have been a source of wonder and amazement to us all. His mind is a veritable fountain-head of beautiful and spiritual thoughts. He has the happy faculty of saying just the right thing at the right time, rebuking, delighting or consoling. He is a marvelous workman whose masterpieces are worthy to be preserved among the art treasures of the world.

"Dr. Gray as a pastor was equally satisfying. Not only his friends in this congregation not only the people of this community, but the multitudes in the countryside near and far testify to the charm and magnetism of his personality. The hospital, the jail, the abode of sorrow and distress know his footfall. He has preached and

FORK RIDGE MAN SHOT SATURDAY

Clayton Lynch Killed By Deputy Sheriff Who Says He Shot in Self Defense

Clayton Lynch, age 21 died at the Prosser-Brammett hospital at 10:30 this morning from the effects of a gunshot wound inflicted by John Wilson, deputy sheriff, at Fork Ridge late Saturday afternoon. Wilson says that he shot in self defense. The trouble occurred over the arrest of G. W. Matthews step-father of Lynch. "I had arrested G. W. Matthews and taken a pistol from him," said John Wilson, "I was taking him to the office of Keeney. As we were passing the home of Clayton Lynch, Matthews said he wanted to go in there. We had an argument over this when Lynch appeared at the door with a high-power rifle. He began raising the rifle and I drew my revolver and fired."

The bullet from Wilson's .45 caliber revolver entered Lynch's left side. He was immediately sent to the Prosser-Brammett hospital where an examination of the wound was made by the physicians. They were of the opinion that the wound would not be fatal unless it should become infected. Wilson went straight to the office of Squire Keeney and surrendered. He was released on bond. The date for his preliminary hearing has not been set.

The deceased is survived by a wife and one small child; by a mother, Mrs. G. W. Matthews; four sisters, Misses Mary, Ethel and Vina Matthews and Mrs. Verna Reddon, all of Knoxville and one brother, George Matthews, also of Knoxville. Funeral arrangements have not been made.

TO BRING LUMBER CONVENTION HERE

District Lumbermen Plan Mid-summer
Outing Here at Hugh Allen's Suggestion

A mid-summer convention of the district lumbermen's association will be held in Middlesboro this summer, according to Hugh Allen of the Allen Lumber Co., who returned Saturday night from the Kentucky Retail Lumbermen's Association convention, held in Lexington Thursday and Friday. This mid-summer convention will bring between fifty and sixty lumber dealers and salesmen here, representing the towns between Louisville and Middlesboro. Mr. Allen said some lumbermen from western Kentucky would also have promised to come.

This convention is not an annual institution, but Mr. Allen persuaded the lumbermen to come to Middlesboro more as an outing than a business convention. Mr. Allen and F. R. Whalin will act as hosts although other organizations in town will cooperate. A banquet will be given and the delegates will be shown the lake, golf links, and other show places in this vicinity.

Mr. Allen reports a splendid meeting at Lexington. All the lumbermen predict a better year than ever for 1923 as building promises to be unprecedented everywhere. The secretary of the national lumbermen's organization attended this meeting and addressed the convention.

A THOUGHT

Better is a little with righteousness than great revenues without right.—Prov. 16:8.

Fortify yourself with moderation; for this is an impregnable fortress.—Epictetus.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

Each year the twelfth of February brings to Americans a deeper appreciation of the man Lincoln whose birthday it commemorates, a higher respect and reverence for his service to mankind. Lincoln died but fifty-eight years ago—a short time in humanity's history, but already he is being glorified into an almost legendary character to whom the whole world pays its homage.

Here was a man who dared to think things for himself, to weigh the future with the past, to distinguish between right and popular opinion. Lincoln was America's prophet as truly as any prophet of Israel. He was a man, not of his generation but of the ages, rising above the adversities that met him at every turn, above the bitter criticism of north and south of friend and enemy.

Because of his great philosophy of personal liberty and the proper relations of men, Abraham Lincoln has become the ideal American. In these days of hectic hurry, of big business and small ideals, when the name, American, has become synonymous with industry and money, this man stands out, still a solitary figure, holding high the standards we still like to call truly American. Love of God, love of country, and love of fellow men—these were the early American standards and some of us hope these virtues are so deeply rooted in Americans that no age of selfishness and indifference can destroy them.

As long as such a man as Lincoln lives in memory as the great national hero, surely America will remain the land of liberty. This man, without hate and without fear, is a fitting bulwark for our nation, a true inspiration to its citizens. Through his sympathy and understanding for men, his deep conviction that right makes might, and his unswerving devotion to that right, he has left a heritage to his countrymen, forever glorious and forever beautiful, one which no age can tarnish and no materialism destroy.

LINCOLN MEMORIAL UNIVERSITY

Another year has past in the history of Lincoln Memorial University. Today two meetings are being held in Washington and New York in the interest of the institution. Representative leaders of our country will be present there. More and more the University is becoming a national institution, reaching farther into the region which it serves and extending more generally to all parts of the world in fame and influence. Lincoln Memorial University has come to stay. It is permanent; it is vital to the development of this region.

The local people of this section cannot realize the far reaching importance of its work. They overlook the economic benefits which it is bringing to every community touched by a former student or graduate; they are prone to think of the school with its five or six hundred students each year.

The prospective of our people is all awry. Look not at what the school is, but look more to what the school has done is doing, and will do. Tens of thousands of young people have come under the influence of this great institution; tens of thousands of dollars are being generated annually to this reason by the work of its trained young men and women who have had the privileges of attending the University. The full results in civic, economic, and moral development for our country due to the work of this institution is incomprehensible.

All praise and good will for this great school of the mountains, destined for still greater things.

THE OPEN FORUM

Clairborne County's Sheriff

Editor Daily News:

When A. J. Greer was a candidate for the office of sheriff he promised the temperance people of Clairborne County that he would do all that lay in his power to put an end to liquor. And thus far it can truthfully be said that he has lived up to his promise. Chief H. E. Ball of the police force at Middlesboro, Ky., in a recent address before the Methodist Bible class of that city, on the subject of temperance says the title largest source of trouble and crime is caused by liquor, and that he with the help of officers of that and adjoining counties would be able to eliminate the liquor trouble. Sheriff A. J. Greer of this county says that he agrees with Mr. Ball that whiskey is the biggest single cause of crime and trouble not only in Clairborne County, but everywhere. He further states that he is ready at all time to help Mr. Ball or any other officer or official at the county or state to eliminate the abominable liquor traffic.

As has already been stated Sheriff Greer is putting forth every effort to stop the liquor traffic and to a large extent his efforts have already been rewarded. He is doing this without cost to the county or taxpayers. The Government pays prohibition agents $1350 a year for the same service the sheriff is doing without cost. He is doing this solely in the interest of our country and people to make our country a better place to live in.

There is no piece of adventure connected with the work. No seeker of adventure need go to the jungles of Africa or to the South sea islands for the office of sheriff is not without danger. Many times his life has been threatened, not only by moonshiners, but by people who claim to be good citizens. Some say he is spending too much time in the prohibition line and leaving off other work, perhaps in civil matters. But to this he answers that enforcing the whiskey laws is one of the main duties of his office, and he does this without fear or favor. To enforce the whiskey laws was one of the issues of his race and he is doing it regardless of what his enemies say about him.

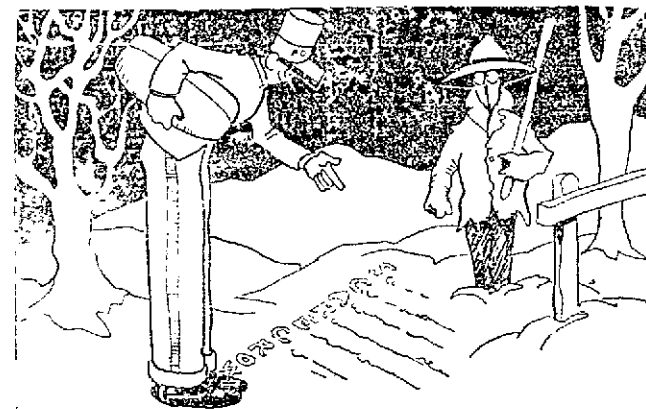

It is to the interest of the taxpayers that the prohibition laws be enforced in order to keep down expenses of cases brought to court. I states that he is doing everything he can lessen the expense of the taxpayers. At this time there are only four prisoners in jail at the expense of the taxpayers. For those who have wanted bond I have seen to it that they made good bonds for their appearance in court, and save the County the expense of bonding them. There are seven Federal prisoners who are not allowed bond, and whose expenses are paid by the government. We people of Tennessee should be glad and congratulate ourselves that we have a Governor and legislature that is making laws that will give the sheriff more power to enforce the prohibition laws.

Furthermore, he says that he wants the people to vote out every official that is letting the criminals slip by, and elect men in office who will do their duty without fear or favor, no matter what. To the temperance people: Conditions are steadily growing better and with your co-operation they will continue to do so. When

This is the valentine that Jack Frost sent to Scarecrow. Only he didn't write it and drop it into the hickory tree postoffice like other people.

No, sir, he wrote it in the snow with a big stick right under Scarecrow's very own straw nose.

Mr. Stridealong Longstride saw it on his way to deliver a parcel post package, and when he came back he told Nancy and Nick and Mr. Stamps about it, so they all rushed out to see. Sure enough there were the mortifying words right in the snow.

This is what they said:

"S is for straw with which you are stuffed,

L is for leaf that is ragged and seuffed

A is for arms that flap this way and that,

R is for rags that would frighten the cat,

E is for empty, the way that you look,

T is for clothes from the farmer you took,

R is for ribs that were made from a broom.

O is for off—in your head there is room.

W is for witch which is just what you look like!"

"Oh, the horrid old thing!" cried

you know that you are right then go ahead.

THE ONE-MAN WOMAN

By Ruth Agnes Abeling.

KATE WARD, widow of DAN WARD, has a visitor CHINATOWN ALICE, who says Dan was father of her child.

DOROTHY, Kate is much perturbed.

Wooded by

JAMES LATHAM, she will not answer until she has solved the mystery of Dan's past. To this end she invites Alice and Dorothy to visit her at the house of her father.

JITLIN PARSONS, but no further information is forthcoming. After Alice's departure, leaving Dorothy for a few days longer stay, Kate finds in the room the former occupied a man's photograph bearing the initials "J. D. G."

GO ON WITH THE STORY

"Haven't heard anything regarding the picture?" It was several days after Kate had found the photograph of the stranger in the room which Alice had occupied that Justin Parsons brought the subject up again.

"Glad the little kid didn't know anything about it," he continued. "I'm fond of the youngster. I'd hate to have her get into trouble for giving anyone's secrets away."

Justin was smiling but he meant what he said more than one might have thought. Dorothy had walked straight into his hear when she walked through the gate of his yard. And Monk, following his master's lead had accepted her as his special charge.

"I'm glad too," Kate glanced up from the paper she was reading.

"Wouldn't it be nice if she could remain here always?"

Kate continued rather carelessly scanning columns until her eye fell on a short story, evidently so unimportant that it had been dropped into the bottom of the column without a head.

A man had dropped dead while walking the main street of Terra Haute. He had not been identified. The last line of the story held Kate's attention.

"The monogram on his cuff links, the only jewelry he wore, is 'J. D. G.'"

"What is it Katie?" Justin Parsons had been watching his daughter's face.

Kate told him.

"And the initials given here," she finished, "are the same as those on the back of the picture I found in my room after Alice had gone."

"Strange!" Was Justin's only comment.

"I must see the body, father," Kate spoke in a voice with conviction.

Then in a voice less sure, "But after I do see it—and I find that it is the face which is photographed here—then what?"

She couldn't go to Alice and question her—she knew that—for after all, it was not her affair, and she shouldn't have kept the picture.

A motor sounded in the distance. Kate looked down the road.

A roadster appeared around the bend. Kate recognized the car of James Latham.

G." Kate read the words aloud.

This fascinated her, she went back over the story for some further hint.

Strangely, there was nothing, not even a description of the man's personal appearance.

"What is it Katie?" Justin Parsons had been watching his daughter's face.

Kate told him.

"And the initials given here," she finished, "are the same as those on the back of the picture I found in my room after Alice had gone."

"Strange!" Was Justin's only comment.

"I must see the body, father," Kate spoke in a voice with conviction.

Then in a voice less sure, "But after I do see it—and I find that it is the face which is photographed here—then what?"

She couldn't go to Alice and question her—she knew that—for after all, it was not her affair, and she shouldn't have kept the picture.

The Memory of You

The memory of you is like a light;
A gleam of sun upon some old gray wall,
A flare of maple crimson in the fall,
Or one lone candle shining in the night;
And though today I may not see the bright,
Glad rapture of your smile, I may recall
Glimpse upon glimpse of you to banish all
Earth's shrouding gloom and turn gray care to flight.

The memory of you will span the years,
Building a bridge from that which might have been Across void chasms to the vast To Be;
For some time there will come an end of tears,
When things misunderstood now will be seen,
And I shall have you not your memory.

Good Manners

A note of condolence on a brief visit to a family which has lost a member by death is a necessary social duty, but anything in the nature of intrusion upon such grief is unkind and inconsiderate, not to mention bad form. During at least the convention of mourning period the family unquestionably will appreciate solitude, except as to the closest personal friends.

TODAY'S RECIPES

PLANKED STEAK By Bertha E. Shapleigh

A popular way of serving steak is to plank it.
Planking is a primitive method of cooking employed by campers.

For home use, have the carpenter cut a plank, 1 1/2 inch thick and of the right size to fit your broiling oven, from well-seasoned hard-wood, pine or oak.

Soak it a long time before using; then brush it over with salad or cooking oil. Each time it is used, wet it and brush it with oil.

The steak is laid on this board, sprinkled with salt and pepper, and the board is then placed under the flame, at some distance as it is broiled.

Turn once and allow to cool 15 minutes.

Next remove plank from the oven and around the edge place a border of well-seasoned mashed potatoes, to which one or two eggs have been added. Place in a hot oven, to brown the potatoes slightly; again remove, garnish with any desired combination of vegetables and serve at the table from the plank.

NEGRO BOY PLEADS GUILTY TO RAISING MONEY ORDERS

PINEVILLE, Feb. 9.—Houston Fulgham, a 15-year old negro boy of Lynch, was arrested Wednesday and brought before Judge Rollins Thursday charged with fraudulently raising postal money orders and presenting same for payment with intent to defraud the United States Government.

Houston may not be particularly original in his methods to "raise" money, but the purpose he spent the money for should be considered original for a 15-year old negro lad. The first postal money order was raised from $1.10 to $15.70, which he sent to a correspondence school for a course of study. The second postal money order which he raised from $1.10 to $11.10 he sent to Sears and Roebuck for books, et cetera, to complete his material for study. And the last two postal orders were not cashed.

He pleaded guilty before Judge Rollins and was placed in jail until he can raise $500 bond. He will be tried at the London term of court. His mother and father are dead and he has been living with a married sister near Lynch coming there from Alabama.
